Provisional

Provisional licences are issued for a period of 3 years and now consist of two licence stages. The licence stages are:

- P1
- P2

Where a red P plate must be displayed for the first 12 months and late-night peer passenger restrictions apply.

Where a green P plate for the remaining 2 years must be displayed. If you are 25 or older when you are issued with your provisional licence, you will be a P2 for the entire 3-year provisional licence period.

If you have an existing ACT Provisional licence, it is recommended that you display GREEN plates for the remainder of your tenure.

It is an offence to drive a motor vehicle that displays incorrect 'L' or 'P' plates, including the wrong colour.

Provisional licence holders have a demerit point threshold of four demerit points. The accumulation of four or more demerit points during this period will result in suspension of the licence for three months. Any suspension periods served do not count towards the required provisional tenure period required to upgrade to a full driver licence.

Provisional licence holders must have a blood or breath alcohol concentration of zero.

It is an offence to drive a motor vehicle that displays 'P' plates when the driver of the vehicle is not a provisional driver.

Members of the Australian Defence Force who are holders of an interstate learner licence may obtain their provisional licence through the one-off assessment with a Government Assessor, or through the logbook system. An applicant who chooses the logbook system must have a current interstate learner licence and that licence must remain current through the full logbook training period up to and including the issue of an ACT provisional licence.

Full

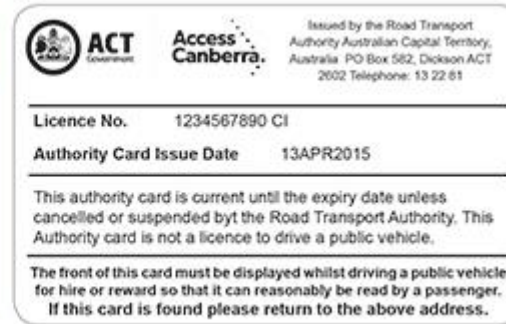

After the provisional period of three years has been completed, you can obtain a full licence which is renewable on each birthday divisible by five years. To obtain a full licence at this time you can attend an Access Canberra Service Centre with Proof of Identity or renew your licence online.

Some drivers and riders who have received a court imposed licence disqualification and have completed an approved alcohol and drug awareness course, may apply to the court for a restricted licence permitting them to drive during specific hours or for specific purposes, but these are only issued in very limited circumstances. People whose licences have been suspended under the demerit point scheme are not eligible to apply for a restricted licence. Restricted licence holders must drive or ride with a blood or breath alcohol concentration of zero.
